

ULI Idaho – Harvesting the Value of Water:

Stormwater, Green Infrastructure, and Real Estate

February 22nd, 8:00-10:00a CenterPlace Regional Event Center
2426 N. Discovery Way, Spokane Valley WA

"As cities increasingly require private developments to incorporate stormwater management mechanisms, green infrastructure is likely to become part of business as usual. Real estate projects that harness the opportunities presented by stormwater management systems will see the benefits, particularly in terms of the design of public and outdoor spaces and opportunities for operational and land use efficiencies."

The growing involvement of the real estate industry in helping municipalities manage stormwater runoff with systems using natural resources is explored in a new Urban Land Institute (ULI) publication, *Harvesting the Value of Water: Stormwater, Green Infrastructure, and Real Estate*.

Come hear from the primary author of the report followed by a local panel of experts that will share successful case studies and lessons learned.

Keynote Presenter:

Katharine Burgess, AICP – Senior Director – Urban Resilience, Urban Land Institute

Katharine is the primary author of the Harvesting the Value of Water report. Through ULI's Urban Resilience Program, Katharine aims to help ULI members and the public make their communities more resilient in the face of climate change. Through research, conferences and events, technical assistance projects, and its work with ULI's District Council network, the Urban Resilience Program focuses on opportunities relevant to the built environment, real estate markets, and the land use policy sector. Many of the Urban Resilience Program's projects have focused on the management of water in urban settings during peak and routine events, including methods for capturing water through green infrastructure.
